PARIS, Nov. 6.—Nikola Tesla, famous inventor, today received a degree of "Doctor Honoris Causa" at the ceremony with which the University of Paris reopened for another year.

President Albert Lebrun and Jean Zay, Minister of Education, wearing robes of silk trimmed with ermine, led an imposing procession into the Sorbonne auditorium for a ceremony first held nearly seven centuries ago.

Professor Edmond Archibald, of McGill University; Dr. Frederick Stang, of the University of Oslo, and Professor Bally, of the University of Geneva, also received degrees of "Doctor Honoris Causa."
